DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY

Repository: The Mariners’ Museum Library
Title: Civil War Sailor Tintype
Inclusive Dates: circa 1862-1865
Catalog number: MS0431
Physical Characteristics: 1 tintype (print) in 1 Union case
Language: English

SCOPE AND CONTENT
The collection consists of a single tintype photograph, housed in a decorative Union case.

The photograph itself is a sixth-plate portrait of a Civil War Union sailor, waist-up. The sailor, an enlisted man, is unidentified.

The brown Thermoplastic Union case, manufactured in 1862, features an embossed rendering of an ironclad in combat under the walls of a fort, presumably meant to represent Fort Monroe, Virginia. This so-called "U.S.S. Monitor at the Fort" design is both scarce and among the most desirable of Civil War patriotic cases. The ironclad is clearly Monitor, as no other ironclad featured square smoke and blower stacks. The case was manufactured by Littlefield, Parson and Company. The label inside case reads "Littlefield, Parson & Co. Manufacturers of Daguerreotype Cases. L.P. & Co. are the sole Manufacturers of Union Cases, with their Embarking Riveted Hinge. Patented October 14, 1856 and April 21, 1857." There is a slight crack in the case cover in the lower section running from the outside edge into the ironclad image.

The photograph is stored in its case within a sink mat.

RELATED MATERIALS
Two other Thermoplastic Union cases with the “Monitor at the Fort” design can be found in the Monitor Collection Associated Records, MS0390, Series 13, Jerry Lee Harlowe Collection. The Associated Records are on deposit in the Library from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration’s Monitor National Marine Sanctuary.

Four other photographs or photographic collections may also be of interest to patrons: “Acting Master James R. Wheeler, USN” (PP2828), who was a gunner aboard USS Kearsarge, the ship that sank the Confederate raider Alabama off Cherbourg, France; “Portrait of a Sailor” (PP2590); “Sailor from USS Congress” (MS0412); and the many tintypes of officers and crew of the Monitor found in the John L. Worden Papers (MS0016).
